

Music Monday: Point of View

A character's "point of view" is the way they see the world. It can be a lot of fun to write about two characters with very different points of view--and it can make for a very interesting poem or song!

In our Music Monday class, we're writing a song about a character who is actually an object (like a toaster, or a phone, or a ball), and then an animal character who has COMPLETELY the wrong idea about what the object is for. You can write your own poem about an object and an animal, or about any two other characters who have a huge disagreement, or a very different "point of view". Write your poem below and have a grownup share it with us at storypirates.com/submit-a-story.
